Funeral this afternoon at 2 o'clock, from 158 Crosby street.

At Louisville, on the 11th ult. Dr. James Spence, of Springfield, Illinois.

At Danvers, on Thursday morning, Stlvester Osson, Esq. aged 87. Another of the worthies of Revosutionary memory is thus numbered with the dead. At the early age of 15, Major Osborn was found in the front ranks of the defenders of his country's rights; and on to the 19th of April, 1775, accompanied his friend, Capt. Foster, to the battle field of Lexington. He was the youngest of the hundred men that went from Danvers on that day—all of whom, excepting the venerable Gideon Foster, at the age of 96, and Levi Preston, at the age of 98, are now gone. Through life, Major Osborn has been distinguished for energy and uprightness of character, and lew men have been more universally beloved and respected. For many years he was one of the most active and influential citizens in the town in which he was born and always resided. For the last twenty years he has carefully avoided mingling with the crowd and bustle of society, preferring the comforts of his own home, and imparting joy by his presence to all around him.—Observor.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE. BY LAST EVENING'S MAIL.

Washington.
[Cerrespondence of the Herald.] WASHINGTON, Oct. 6, 1845.

Foreign Mail Proposals-The Cape Horn Route, and the Route via the Rocky Mountains to the Mouth of the Columbia Considered-Mr. Holmes, of South Carolina-Independent Attitude of South Carolina and her Politicians-Policy of New The Postmaster General has issued propose foreign mail transportation, in conformity with the law of Congress of March last. And first comes the question, why has the Postmaster General suf-fered seven months to elapse before the issue of these proposels? Has he been deliberating all this time, "whether the public interest will be promoted by this proposed foreign mail transportation, and just hit upon the conclusion that it will? Or, is he opposed to the new expense upon the Department (Or is his object to ascertain, the probable cost of mail transportation as proposed, and to report thereon to Congress, from such returns as may come in before the first Monday in December next. We are strongly induced to adopt this latter conjecture as the most reasonable in the premises, leaving it to the discretion of Congress whether that portion of the Act of March last, authorizing his foreign mail transportation, shall be repealed or continued in force; and whether any contracts shall accordingly be made under it or not. We are apprehensive, that in the face of the great importance of these foreign mail lines, that the face of their enormous cost wall of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the probable adoption of this new Post Office experiment, to wit: the amount of patronage it confers upon the Department in the discretionary power touching "the stipulation to carry an agent of the Post Office Department with the mails." From six to a dozen mail agencies at sea, at $2000 a year and found, will be likely to have some weight with members of Congress, among whom public offices, great and small, are in such regular demand. Indeed, members of Congress among whom public offices, great and small, are in such regular demand. Indeed, members of Congress are fairly monopolizing the enormous patronage of the general government. A chapter upon this subject might be compiled from the history of so short a period as the seven months existence of the present administration, which would astound the people, and lead them seriously to debate the question whether Congress and esciption of the Scatter of the Sca

the Baltimore combination against her, and it is probable that, hereafter, even her domestic political intrigues will be controlled more by influences at Washington than the heretofore inexorable promaciaments of the Albany junto.

Briefly, the only independent State in the Union at this juncture is South Carolina—independent of the administration, its power and its patronage, defying the one and scoraing the other; watching, with all vigilance, however, any rupture in the lines, so as, at the signal, to throw her whole disposable force into the breach, and carry the day. We shall discuss these general topics more deliberately in some succeeding chapters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6, 1845. Another Miraculous Escape—Mr. Paine of Massa-chusetts and the Mysterious Assassin Once More. Mr. H. M. Paine, of Oxford, Mass., who has Mr. H. M. Paine, of Oxford, Mass., who has been four times shot at, once in this city last spring, when he was attacked by two assassins, and robbed of $2,600, and three times in or near Oxford, Mass., by some mysterious and persevering assassin, has again, it would appear, had another narrow escape this evening, the narrowest of all, from the circumstancial evidence in the case.

Mr. Paine is at present boarding at the U. S. Hollie this circ.

tel in this city. He came on some ten days since, partly to see safely delivered at the National Obserpartly to see safely delivered at the National Observatory, a globe made at his factory in Oxford, Mass. for astronomical observations, the determination of latitudes and longitudes, &c., a very ingenious piece of mathematical mechanism by the way, and partly to right himself before the people of Washington, in reference to the evidence of the repeated attempts at his life, by the exhibition of the weunds or scars upon his person. The exemination was accordingly had a few nights since at the United States Hotel, at which about a dozen gentlemen were present, and all appeared to be entirely satisfied that Mr. Paine's complaints were founded upon conclusive testimony—the marks on his legs, his breast and his forehead.

According to the statement of our landlords

Paine's complaints were founded upon conclusive testimony—the marks on his legs, his breast and his forehead.

According to the statement of our landlords Messrs. Tyler and Birch, (for the writer was absent from the house at the time,) at about a quarter past nine this evening Mr. Paine was standing in the portice of the hotel, which is but a step above the level of the side-walk, and was in conversation with two gentlemen, one in close proximity, upon each side of him. Mr. Tyler was also within the portice at the time, about ten feet distant from Mr. Paine and his friends. At about twenty feet distant several hacks were standing on the Avenue, opposite to the portice. All at once, with a sudden start, Mr. Paine threw up his hands and caught his hat, which appeared to be driven backward from his head against the granite column, in front of which he was standing, one of the columns within the portice supporting the main body of the building. He immediately retired within the hotel, and on examining his hat, called Mr. Tyler, who found it perforated on both sides in a direct line, as if a bullet had passed through it immediately over the head of the wearer, the ball ranging as if fired from a position in front lower than that occupied by Mr. P. Mr. Birch went to the spot where Mr. P. had been standing, and found a large battered slug, wrapped in tape, at the foot of the granite pillar, and a distinct indentation in the pillar corresponding to the range of the shot. A number of persons at once set out in various directions in the durkness, in hopes of arresting the retreat of the assessin, but of the various individuals in the street nothing could be detected of criminal intent.

It is supposed that Mr. P. was fired at by some person with an air gun, from behind one of the hacks, the drivers being in the habit, while waiting for customers, of leaving their boxes, and standing about in clusters upon the powenent, to the annoyance of all passengers. No report was heard, as far as we can learn.
